Dear Mr. Brown,

I wrote Morgan promptly. I've had no response because there was nothing he could add. However, I'll be seeing him in several weeks and will make certain there is nothing he can add. The letters were anonymous. He is now engaged in a different line of work and cannot reach the same audience. He has returned to news work. His show was scratched.

There is no way I can tell you to get in touch with the writer. This has happened to me often, but people are afraid.

If I get anything on this or anything else related to codes on any kind, I'll let you know when there is enough to make sense. For example, I have a correspondent who visualizes an entirely different kind of code in some of Marina's correspondence, where the allusions contain the message, as to, for example, Boris Goudenoff, some of Tschokowsky, etc.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
